Bunkers International now supplying 2010 ISO 8217 fuel in Colombia

2010 ISO-compliant product is now available upon request for customers in the ports of Cartagena and Barranquilla.

Orlando – June 29, 2010 – Bunkers International Corp (www.bunkersinternational.com), the leading independent marine fuel supplier in Colombia, in collaboration with its joint venture partner, Vanoil S.A, is now delivering upon request marine bunker fuels meeting the new 2010 ISO 8217 marine fuel specifications at the ports of Cartagena and Barranquilla. The new products have very low metals content and all other parameters within the 2010 specifications. Products can be blended to meet either 1.50% or 1.00% maximum sulphur levels.

“This product will be of great interest to our customers with charter party agreements that mandate the newest ISO specifications”, said John Canal, President of Bunkers International. “Charterers can meet their contractual obligations while receiving the same high-quality service we have become known for. In fact, Bunkers International also offer a full service and fees inclusive "bunkers-only" call to the Cartagena anchorage which should appeal to vessels in transition to areas requiring the ISO 2010 specification or 1.00% max sulphur product which Bunkers International can also provide.” All products sold by Bunkers International in Colombia are fully certified for sale by the state run refinery and the Colombian government for sale to foreign-flagged vessels and can be blended to meet all ISO designated specifications as noted above.

Since its founding in 2000, the joint venture between Bunkers International and Vanoil has become the largest marine fuel supply operation in Colombia, with a fleet of seven barges, shore side storage, the most experienced crews, and sophisticated computerized blending systems.
