Bunkers International expands into the South African Bunkering Market

New company-owned sales office will address the needs of the South African bunkering market.

Orlando – March 6, 2007 – Bunkers International Corporation

(www.bunkersinternational.com) has opened a company-owned sales office in Cape Town, South Africa to serve the South African and African bunkering market. Named “Bunkers International South Africa”, this new office will offer bunker services directly to the market in South Africa and offshore markets west and east of the African continent and to ports associated with those areas. Prior to opening this office, Bunkers International worked with partners in the region.

Bunkers International has appointed Brian Turnbull and Mark Wild as directors of the new entity. Both Mr. Turnbull and Mr. Wild have extensive experience in bunkering and have worked at length in the African bunker market. “We are very excited about the South African market,” said John Canal, President of Bunkers International. “When we combine the global reach of Bunkers International with the market knowledge of the local sales team, our worldwide customers will be able to get global service with a local touch.”

The new office has commenced operations and has been serving customers beginning in February 2008. Contact information for the new office can be found on the Bunkers International website at www.bunkersinternational.com.

Bunkers International has been expanding operations globally since 2000, creating new operations in Colombia, the UK, Singapore, Turkey, and now South Africa. The company has significantly increased its trading division, helping drive a six-fold increase in revenue in the past four years. With strong capitalization and a global customer base of thousands of ship operators, Bunkers International is well positioned to serve the South African market.
